Topic: Status of posting the comments to the website: All the comments have been prepared for posting. They have been organized and personal information has been redacted where needed. We are now finalizing the language to accompany the comments and provide context. I provided a draft for comments to team yesterday. Sheila is modifying with edits and will have the language for review within an hour or so. The plan is to post the comments this week.

I have scheduled a short meeting to discuss language with Marianne at 3:30pm.

Subject: Next communications steps for Yakima

Hi Folks:

Just a quick follow up from our meeting yesterday to clarify our plans for rolling out the data from the recent well drilling in the Yakima Valley. Given the work remaining on communications materials, I'm thinking we will likely be ready to roll the data out early next week. Between now and then, here are the pieces of work needed and who is responsible for them:

- 1) Letter to the editor -- Bill (has a near final draft ready for Dennis' review)
- 2) One-pager summarizing the well drilling effort and the sampling results as well as next steps (a report will be produced). This could be used both as a cover transmittal page for the data tables and used as web language -- Sheila taking the lead.
- 3) Internal Q and A document anticipating questions we may get from the press, stakeholders and public about the sampling results and proposed responses -- Sheila taking the lead.
- 4) Key messages for Tom to use when talking to the press -- Bill

Right now, we are not thinking of issuing a press release, instead we would walk Ross Courtney through the data over the phone. We need to hear Dennis' thoughts on that tactical decision.

Ed will need to brief Dennis on our plans, so if we can get good drafts of these materials by tomorrow COB, we could share them w/Dennis on Thursday morning.

Also, a slightly different topic: What is the status of posting the public comments to the website? We have an outstanding FOIA request from the Herald Republic for these.

Thanks all.
